Class Song

TUNE—Love's Old Sweet Song.

1. We are the Senior Class of twenty-two,
Many the year's of toil we have gone through,
Many the hours we've spent in perfect bliss,
Many the lessons we have learned ere this.
And still we labor until our work is through,
Until we accomplish what we wish to do.

CHORUS.

Standing for the right thing in all we say and do,
Dauntless, pure and honest, live our whole lives through.
Though we're often tempted, and we almost yield,
Still our stronger nature, our temptations steal,
Our temptations steal.

2. At the end of this year we'll part forever more,
Classmates now, will be classmates of yore,
Yet in the heart of each a vivid picture stays,
Of our dear Senior Class of olden days
And though we're parted from each other's sight,
May God bless us and make our lives all bright.

By ONELIA JONES.

Senior Class Poem

I.

Like flower seeds planted with care,
Into soil so rich, and so rare;
Noble Freshies we were one day,
And worked hard to lead the way,
We'll leave the seed, and Freshman Class
We finished that year, but not so fast.

II.

The seed has started to sprout,
So now, you may give a shout—
And we're not Freshies any more,
A faithful class, the Sophomore.
The flowers are growing fast,
And we're promoted at last.

III.

The flowers are budding soon,
In a few days, they'll be in bloom.
As for our Junior Class, so true,
The toilsome year'll soon be thru.
The pretty flowers, are full in bloom,
And we'll be Seniors, very soon.

IV.

The seed you planted with care,
Have brought forth fruit so rare,
And the dear old Senior Class,
Has brought forth, fruit at last.
Like the flowers you bid farewell,
To the Juniors we wish them well.

By ELLA BRITT.

Senior Class Will

By EMMIE KILLINGSWORTH

This is the last will and testament of the Senior Class of 1922. Expecting to meet with great success in the future, we hereby make our last will and testament.

We appoint Prof. Rowe Watson, to be our sole executor (by kind permission of the Juniors.)

I give and bequeath to Jim Cleverdon my knowledge of Chemistry; as this is only a case of returning borrowed property. I don't deserve any thanks from him, and will not likely get any.

To Amanda Lou Hamilton, Lucile Anderson wills her last pair of silk hose; providing she keeps the seams straight.

To Georgia Mae Burns, Lucile Hall wills her pink powder puff; although old and worn by constant use, it will lead her beautifully through her Senior Year.

Lois Corley, realizing that her days of riding to school with Max are most over, she generously and impartially wills this privilege to Saidye Dolive.

Thelma Thompson, without hesitation, bravely and boldly wills her curls to Nora Duck and Vada Parson. Girls, no pleading and scrambling; there shall be plenty for all of you.

Lottie Stewart wills her radiant personality and knowledge of Cicero to Pauline McLeod and Anna Lee Owens.

Allee Cromartie wills her gift of gab and grin to the Hand Brothers. We trust they may be able to survive it.

Onelia Jones wills her desire to sing "Abide With Me," when Mr. Watson is spying on the Senior Class, to Vera Merrifield and Myrtle Steele.

Lucy Merrill wills her meekness to Hugh Lide.

Mary Belle Irwin and Winnie G. will and bequeath their secret of how to keep a supply of face powder near them at all times, to Dorothy Aylin.

Eula Irwin wills her bluff in Chemistry to Julian Bristow.

Mabel Smith and Ruby Levins will their traits of joy and love for Solid Geometry and the Study Period just before noon, to Margarete Stover.

Ella Britt wills her honor of having proven that every one is able to keep quiet and not giggle at least twice during the school year to Ivan Merrill.

Errol Richerson, having many valuable traits that he can't decide just whom to bestow upon, leaves them to Mr. Watson to distribute among Jack Hamelton, Frank Northcut and Anderson Stone, hoping that in spite of the lack of Gray Matter, they may realize the unlimited value of the gifts which they receive.

To the whole Faculty, we will them our love, for they will need it, no doubt, when the present Juniors become Seniors.

Signed by the Seniors as their Last Will and Testament in the presence of us, their teachers and keepers, present at the same time, who in their presence and in the presence of each other, have hereunto signed our names as witnesses:

ROWE WATSON,
RALPH CARROLL.

Senior Class History of '22

In the fall of 1918 there was a great commotion when twelve green little Freshmen scrambled into an aeroplane to begin their flight through high school. Each gazed upon the Pilot in rapt attention as he stood towering high above them with arms "dangling miles out of his sleeves." Their Secretary has his name recorded as Mr. Hale. He commanded the mechanic, Mr. West, whom they all loved, to start the engine and thus the Freshman tour was begun. They persisted in dangling into space over the sides and Allee Cromartie, the most adventurous, bumped her head into a star and scraped off a lot of star dust.

On beginning the second journey, they sailed away with a grain or two of more knowledge, an ounce or two of self importance and a pound or two of good humor. The new Pilot being a fat jolly man, who mixed fun with the work, managed to extract a great deal of work from even Ruby Levins. He was known as Mr. Rowe Watson. The mechanic, a handsome young man, with a tinge of romance about him, smoked his pipe, gazed at the moon "and let the rest of the world go by." His appellation was Stanley H. Peavy.

Varied were the experiences for the next two years. While crossing the Milky Way, Onelia Jones grabbed the big dipper and began to dip up milk for everybody. Winnie G. Scarborough exclaimed, "My just think of all the nice milk and it doesn't cost anything." As we passed the dog star, Lois Corley grew very much excited and nothing would do her but to have him towed on behind. Lottie Stewart, who has been faithful to the class by shouldering its many responsibilities, upon seeing the Southern Cross in all of its glory, seized and it took the burden for her own; it has been said that she felt much more at home carrying a cross.

One little girl could not be interested in the land of the sky; all she wanted to do was to sit in a "Morris chair" and dream. This pensive young lady was Lucille Hall. Early one morning a bulky object came into sight. Ella Britt gave in her verdict that it was a great big hunk of cheese, but Errol Richerson promptly said it wasn't, just to have something to say. By this time they had come so near the object until Eula Irwin discovered the form of a man in it and was busily making eyes at the man in the moon when Mr. Watson stopped the comedy by one reproving glance.

The fourth and last journey was begun September 5, 1921. After former hazardous exploits you may be sure the old plane was battle scarred and worn, therefore a new aeroplane was necessary. This time their plane was built on the latest model, fitted out with every modern convenience; it was commonly called the B. C. H. S. However, with all this newness, they still clung to their old Pilot, who took up his new responsibility with a little more than even the old time enthusiasm. The influence of his able assistants inspired the young people with higher and nobler ambitions. Their instructions and training were so thorough that the flyers were soon ready to begin a flight alone.

Their first day up proved a very trying one for the only boy in the class. He was insulted at least three times, when some extremely green Freshie would hail him as a brother with a slap on the back. Whereupon dear little Errol would shrug his shoulders, raise his eye-brows and look a hole right through the Freshie; exasperated that he should be taken for a Freshman. Then he would say, with all the dignity he could command, "Do you know whom you are addressing? I am a Senior." Mr. Richerson would then stroll nonchalantly away.

Lois Corley, the youngest member of the group, who hails from Loxley, is the most profound thinker and philosopher. She has attained a remarkable knowledge of the language, which proves a thorn in the flesh for so many pupils—Latin—being able to read it fluently.

"Her dark and wavy nut brown hair is tossing out upon the summer breeze, Her sparkling eyes are wondrous fair; her voice is like the music in the trees."
This little girl is Winnie G. Scarborough.

"Her life is gentle and the elements so mixed in her that nature might stand up and say, 'She is a woman.' " Words fail to express the deep regard that both students and teachers feel toward Onelia Jones. She has been an excellent pupil and an ambitious worker, a leader in her society, and she has a smile for everyone; also kind words to soothe the wounded heart.

Here comes Miss Hall. She thinks too much; such girls are dangerous—but—what—does—she—think—of? As President of the class, she served well.

Next on the roll came Lottie Stewart, dependable and energetic. She has won the admiration of the class, not because of talent alone, but it is the fruit of hard work, which further portrays that sterling character that is so much a part of her.

She's a peach, that Allee—the cutest, the wittiest girl in the bunch; it is needless to say they loved her. She has been a good pupil. However, hard lessons never worried her. Many times while class-mates pored over their lessons, she slept soundly.

Eula Irwin is an inquisitive little "Miss," anxious to get out into the world to steer her own aeroplane. There she won't be worried with such insignificant things as Chemistry. Being vivacious and of a happy disposition, she makes friends and keeps them.

Her sister, Mary Belle, has the jewels of modesty, purity and fidelity in her crown of virtue. In her school work she was conscientious and diligent. She has high ideals and the class has a right to expect great results from her labors.

Now, upon this long journey, the class needed someone full of enthusiasm to encourage them. Ruby Levins, a loyal supporter of the class, was always found near to give the much needed help. May she guide her ship safely through life.

The gift of Calliope was bestowed upon Ella Britt. While her artistic temperament sometimes may have seemed to hold her aloof, yet her devotion to the class was shown by her willingness to perform any duty or task imposed upon her.

One day not long after they had left the earth, three spokes from the "Hub" of Baldwin County landed in B. C. H. S. to contribute their strength to the steering of the class of 1922. Mabel Smith has more distinction and originality than the name Smith implies. But she is right there when it comes to defending her cognomen; she says, "Everybody was named Smith until someone did something he was ashamed of and had to change his name."

A cunning and artful lass is Emmie Killingsworth; she has her life planned six years ahead. But look out little girl for "The best laid plans of mice and men, gang aft a gley."

The good nature of Lucille Anderson is proverbial among the Seniors. She is indeed a ray of human sunshine sent out to brighten all who may fall within it's reach. Now abideth these three, Mabel, Lucille and Emmie, but the greatest (largest) of these is Lucille.

The latest passenger on board, Lois Slocum, has so conducted her life and action since she came into our midst until she has captured every heart in the class.

One bright day in May, all the people in Bay Minette were looking skyward; there seemed to be a general disturbance in the clouds. A tiny speck appeared on the horizon that grew and grew—they feared a thunder storm. Anyway it took the town by storm when the aeroplane, B. C. H. S., landed from its "maiden" trip. The passengers on the plane alighted eagerly, each prepared to steer his own ship of life through cloudy and sunny skies with the determination to fulfill their motto, "To the stars through difficulty."

By THELMA THOMPSON.

Senior Class Prophecy, 1922

While sitting all alone the other day reading and enjoying the sweetness of solitude, I began nodding, nodding, nodding, and at last fell asleep and reached the beautiful land of dreams.

This dream represented my dear old Senior Class six years in the future.

To begin with I beheld myself in the whirl of a crowded city street. Some one stepped on my foot and popped the botton off my shoe and there I was—I searched every street I passed for a shoe shop and at last on one of the side streets I saw a sign which read, "A Mender of Bad Souls," S-o-u-l-s—Souls; I entered the little shop and in a very dark corner, a little man was sitting mending shoes. You can imagine how I felt when I found it was Errol Richerson, the only boy in our Senior Class. I told him my misfortune and as he was the same old good hearted Errol, he fixed my shoe free of charge. I did tell him how to spell shoe sole, s-o-l-e, instead of soul.

I decided to do some shopping while in the city and I went into one of the largest stores in the place. I saw quite a number of powder puffs and they looked so soft and pretty, that I decided to make a closer investigation. When I had found one that I liked, I looked all around to find some one to wait on me, and who do you reckon the sales lady was—yes, Winnie G. Scarborough. Just as I came out of the store and walked up the street a few steps, whom should I meet but Lucile Anderson. There was a red-headed, freckle-faced, pug-nosed Irishman by her side, whom she introduced as her husband. She seemed quite proud of him and said she had never been happier in her life.

Next in my dream, I beheld myself in the little town of Carpenter, about seven miles from Bay Minette. It seemed that it was Sunday, as I heard church bells ringing and saw little girls and boys going to Sunday school. I decided to go in and join these little folks. A few minutes after I was comfortably seated in the church, I looked around to see what was happening and who do you think I saw teaching the Sunday school class—Mary Belle Irwin. I heard her say, "Johnnie, you tell me what the golden rule is." The little boy replied, "Do unto others as you would that others should do unto you." "Yes, that's just right," said Mary Belle. I thought to myself, well, here is one of my classmates who did not forget the Lord and is still serving Him.

After leaving this church I was attracted by very loud singing. To my left was a large tent. I walked to the tent and opened the flap, and much to my surprise, I saw Lottie Stewart leading the Holiness Choir and Allee Cromartie, who was always Lottie's pal, preaching.

As is the queer nature of a dream, from here I went to a very large town. It began to grow dark and I knew I must have a place to spend the night. I saw a little boy on the street and asked him if he knew where I could get lodging for the night. He gave me an address which read, "Main St., No. 13." I said to myself, I don't much like that number, but I don't know anywhere else to go. I rang the bell and the servant ushered me into the room. Well, it just looked as if life was made up of surprises, as there seated in a Morris chair, was my old Class President, Lucile Hall—I remembered Lucile saying "darn" this and "darn" that and "darn" the other in school, but now she was darning socks. As there was nothing to do to celebrate our reunion, Lucile and I went to the theatre. A very nice looking bunch of dancers were presented and I noticed one small girl in the center, who was very attractive, and as the dancing proceeded one could see that she was the leader. Lucile and I looked at each other in astonishment, for we had both recognized the leader as Eula Irwin.

Before leaving this town the next day, I went into a large store to purchase a handkerchief and I saw Emmie Killingsworth, another member of the 1922 Class, who was the cashier. On the register was a sign which read, "Don't Flirt with the Cashier;" and I said, "Why Emmie, do you still flirt?" On coming out of the store I saw a very large crowd assembled. I went over to the crowd and in the center was an airplane. The price of a ride was ten dollars, but as the pilots were Mabel Smith and Ruby Levins, I had a free ride in the air. When we came back to earth, I told Mabel and Ruby they were certainly fine and darling pilots. These girls said, "Let's go and call on Lois, who is living in town." Before we reached the house they told me she was married and, of course, I asked to whom. The answer was "Max." We just entered the house without ringing the door bell (which I never intend to do again), for Lois was in a fit of temper and Max was all huddled over in a corner saying, "I was boss before I was married," and just as we entered the room Lois said, "Yes, Mister, but you are married now."

Later I found myself wandering all alone in a country school district. Finally, I saw a little house in the distance and when I reached it and went in, I saw it was a school house. The teacher's back was turned as I approached and she was writing on the board. This is what she wrote, "A still tongue makes a wise head." I guessed it was Lucy Merrill before she ever turned around. About this time I heard the shrill whistle of a train and as it is in dreams, my plans were suddenly changed for a trip to New York. I did not talk to Lucy, but hurriedly grabbed my baggage and scurried off to the station; I caught the train and finally reached my destination. As I entered the depot I was attracted by the very sweet face of a lady who occupied the Traveler's Aid chair. Desiring information, but desiring more to talk to this beautiful lady, I walked over to the chair and made myself known. As our conversation progressed, I found her to be my classmate, Lois Slocum. She said she would like to accompany me in my sight-seeing through the city. Among the places of interest we went to see, was the publishing house of the Literary Digest—well, I just must tell you what was told me by the manager of the place. He said, "I am very much pleased with the young lady who is writing poetry for the Literary Digest. She pleases me and the whole nation with her poetry." After hearing all this praise of the poetess, I asked her name and he said, "Her name is Miss Ella Britt, the greatest modern poetess. I thought of the days of graduation when Ella was Class Poet and how easily the rhymes flowed from her pen."

A pleasure which I was denied in real life, I was given in my dream, for I made a visit to the White House. Upon entering the East room, I saw my old desk-mate, Thelma Thompson, sitting in the President's chair, enjoying the highest honor that can befall an American citizen. At this I was not surprised, for I remembered what a sweet girl Thelma was at school, and how I watched her bright mind grow brighter from day to day, and knew that some day she would be a brilliant woman.

As I was leaving the beautiful land of dreams, there passed before me a vision of my four high school teachers during my senior year. Just as Mr. Watson was beginning to lecture, just as Mr. Carroll started to yell, just as Miss Yarbrough was going to say something wise and just as Miss Wood was going to say something funny, I awoke from my dream, to find myself wishing you, my teachers and you my class-mates, health, happiness and prosperity on your journey through life.

ONELIA JONES.

Football Review

The football season of 1921-22 was both a failure as well as a success. We were disappointed in not winning more games, but on the other hand, we are proud of the good showing made by our inexperienced eleven against some of the strongest high school football elevens in the State. Students, teachers and football fans are unanimous in their praise for the fighting spirit displayed by the young Baldwin County High School team.

Our first game, with the strong Jackson team, proved very disastrous, the Aggies piling up 54 points while we were unable to score. Lame legs, scarred faces, torn ears, and numerous "charlie horses" bore testimony to the fierceness of Jackson's attack. However, Bay Minette fought to the last second. The Baldwin County eleven seemed to have "found themselves" in the Monroeville game, although decisively beaten by the score of 24-0, yet the team made a credible showing in both the offensive and defensive game.

On October 21, 1921, our warriors crowned themselves with glory and properly christened the new athletic field by defeating the strong Andalusia team here by the close score of 7-6. It was a great day for Baldwin.

We had hardly ceased rejoicing over our victory before Atmore came down into our very camp and humbled us by the score of 13-7.

Spring Hill was given the surprise of their lives the following Saturday; Bay Minette scored the first touchdown and held the strong Hillians 7-0 until the third quarter. It was Spring Hill's reserve strength that finally overcame us.

Atmore again beat us by a lonely touchdown on their own field November 11.

Andalusia evened up with us on their home grounds November 18, nosing out a victory by the score of 13-7. After a spectacular run of 65 yards, Stuart was laid out and, of course, losing him, crippled our backfield. Coach Brown admitted that we had him worried.

Pensacola made us literally bite the dust on her "sand pile" Thanksgiving Day, winning by the score of 46-0. Stone easily punched their line but costly fumbles and hard luck seemed to come our way and we lost to a team considered our equals. Spring Hill defeated Pensacola by the same score they beat us.

The team wishes to sincerely thank the cheer leaders and "rooters" for their loyal support in defeat and in victory.

Let's adopt Centre's motto for 1922—"Each for All, and All for Each."

MR. WATSON       -   -   -   -   -   -   -       ATHLETIC DIFECTOR

“Loved and respected by all his men,
To every student a loyal, true friend.”

No matter how hard the day's work, at practice time, we always saw Professor Watson on the field ready and willing to give his best to the team.

FRANK NORTHCUTT       -   -   -   -   -   -   -       CAPTAIN

Unanimously elected Captain. He faithfully discharged his duties and deserves all the honors bestowed upon him.

MR. CARROLL       -   -   -   -   -   -   -       COACH

“A splendid Coach, loyal and true,
Without him, what would B. C. H. S. do?”

A man who does a great deal of thinking and little talking.

JACK HAMILTON - - - - - RIGHT HALF

"Geometry, to Jack, was Dutch,
But his passing to "Goose" was very, very much."

The Hamilton-Dawson passing machine figured in every game. Jack's passing was uncannily accurate and with just the correct timing. Many of Bay Minette's long passes were made after Jack had dodged or shook off the whole line. A hard working, fast, cool-headed man.

J. B. BLACKBURN - - - - - QUARTER BACK

"With the ladies and on the field, J. B. was mighty strong,
He hypnotised his hearers by singing a little song."

A capable field general and a splendid fighter. Ask Atmore's line about some of J. B.'s high dives.

"More like a cyclone than a man,
In broken-field running he filled their eyes full o' sand."

Our best ground gainer. "Booker" went through Andalusia for 65 yards and that's some stunt. A twisting, fighting, jumping, half-back that was hard to stop.

DONALD KYSER - - - - - RIGHT END

"Some player, "Jazzy" by name,
He hit 'em hard and won his fame
By consistently playing a jam-up game."

"Johnny" didn't wait for them to come to him, but with lightning speed somehow spilled our opponents before they could get started. For pure hard down nerve we hand it to Kyser—his motto is, "The bigger they are, the harder they fall."

AUGUSTUS DAWSON - - - - - LEFT END

"For catching a forward pass,
"Goose" simply couldn't be surpassed."

The best offensive end in South Alabama. We give "Octopus" credit for making most of our touchdowns. Jolly and good-natured in defeat or victory—and an all-'round good sport.

RUDOLPH CROMARTIE - - - - - SUBSTITUTE

"He hit 'em hard with his wary dome,
And he always carried the pigskin home."

Rudy hits the line with all his might. Although weighing only one hundred thirty pounds, he gained yard after yard against strong teams. A good man on the offensive.

THEODORE NIHART - - - - - LEFT GUARD

"In every play, "Rosebud" was nigh,
He tackled hard and knocked them high
And they'd fall to the ground out of the sky."

He is a tiger—his own Dad said so. Nihart held his ground like a Stonewall and the backfield could depend on him opening up a hole. A valuable man on anybody's team.

JULIAN BRISTOW - - - - - LEFT GUARD

"Around the ladies "Cupid" does shine
And in football games he was ever on time."

Bristow put his whole soul into every play; he did his very best. "One more pass, J. B., you hear?" Fighting to the last minute, "Ada" showed the kind of spirit we all admire.

HOWARD NIHART - - - - - SUBSTITUTE

"A man's knocked out—send for Howard,
He'll tread 'em rough, because he's not a coward."

Able and willing to play anywhere on the line. One of our best reserves. Watch his smoke next year.

CAPTAIN FRANK NORTHCUTT - - - - - LEFT TACKLE

"He led his team as all good general's do,
And much credit and honor to big Frank is due."

Loyal, courageous, a capable leader and a tireless fighter. Always cheering the team, ready to shoulder the blame, Frank to us, is a man's man.

ANDERSON STONE - - - - - FULL BACK

"A good all-'round man was he,
He hit a line like the D——."

Pensacola will testify to the above. Anderson made their line crumble like sand. "Ram" Stone hit the line low, and with his long stride reminded one of Tech's Strupper or Alabama's "Bully" Vandegraff. A five yard gain over tackle was "pie" to "Sloppy." Good all-'round man on both offensive and defensive.

LUDIE SCARBOROUGH - - - - - RIGHT GUARD

"Strong as a giant, big as a cow,
In holding the line, "Pig Iron" knew how."

We are not asking any questions, but we would like to know why Ludie's man always got knocked out. When you see that 'possum grin, it's time to "about face." A little shy of practice, but a good man for all that.

LESLIE PAYNE

RIGHT TACKLE

"Tough as leather, hard as a rock,
Show us the man "Misery" couldn't stop."

The best defensive High School Tackle in the world. Dependable, cool, steady; a powerful tackler hard to get around. Picked by "Red" Brown for "All South Alabama Team." "'Nuf sed."

MILTON HALL

SUBSTITUTE

"Full of pep, flat and fast,
When he carried the ball
"Milt" showed SOME class."

Outside work kept Hall from making a regular position in the backfield
Good on both the offense and defense.

Jokes

If you fail to see through any of these jokes copy them off on tissue paper and try again. (JOSEPH HAND, Editor in Chief).

Mr. Carroll (In Chemistry Class)—What is hard water?

Amanda Lou Hamilton—Ice.

Mr. Carroll (In Chemistry Class)—I will now take some hydrogen and some chloroform and then———

Eula—Good idea.

Hugh—Go on, your crazy.

Joel—Well, you are the biggest fool I know.

Mr. Carroll (Overhearing the argument)—Boys, don't forget I'm here.

Mable (To football star)—Were you ever penalized for holding?

Jack—Er—well I had my face slapped once for holding.

A sign in Ray's (Hardware) Window—Shaving mugs, $2.00.

(Costly shave.)

Ella—What do you think of my new shoes?

Allee—Immense.

Miss Wood—Who wrote Sir Mallories Mort De'Arther?

Howard—I don't know, Miss Wood.

Joseph Hand—Both Christmas and New Year came on Sunday last year, didn't they?

Vada—So did Easter. (Innocent.)

Mr. Carroll—Hugh, what is President Hardings' platform?

Hugh—It is sort of a high board place where he speaks.

Miss Wood—For the next English lesson, take the life of Shakespeare.

Ivan Merrill— Oh, that I had the chance.

Miss Wood—Leslie, tell me something about Martin Luther.

Leslie—Well, he believed in starvation by faith, but as he didn't thrive on it, he tried the "Diet of the Worms."

Joel Bright—When I was little, mother gave me a dollar every time I took a dose of oil, but I spent it.

Mr. Watson—You should have saved it, then you could have said you were like Rockefeller—you made your money in oil.
