Apple Distinguished School 2012-2013

After being the pilot school for Baldwin County's Digital Renaissance last year, Baldwin County High School has been recognized nationally as an Apple Distinguished School. "It is very much an honor," said Instructional Transformation Specialist Janice Simon, "Our students have made remarkable strides. I couldn't be more proud of the community which has embraced this." This highly prestigious award was only given to 86 schools this year. In order to be named an Apple Distinguished School, a school must show innovative learning and teaching, visionary leadership, and compelling evidence of success. Over the the past two years, the Digital Renaissance has helped the students of Baldwin County broaden their technology prospectives, engage in more collaborative projects, and increased their scores for college entrance exams.
